Mission Partner Prayer and update from A Rocha

The reserve at Wolf Fields is starting to show more signs of life as spring is coming around with a few bumblebees and crocuses emerging. Andrew is seeing some bird species that he has not seen on the reserve before like Wrens, Goldcrests and a pair of Goldfinches that he hopes will nest on the site. Volunteering is going well, although, numbers are still not where Andrew would like them to be. However, the few volunteers he has now are very hardworking and have really helped move things along on site.

They have a "new" area of the reserve (The council have only recently been given permission to A Rocha to manage it) and Andrew and the wider A Rocha team are trying to come up with ways they can use this new space to draw in potential funders. Andrew sent a big thank you to Carl, Lilian and Raymond who are a great help to him in looking after this special place.

Please pray:

- for more engagement from and with the local community and a building up of a passionate, core volunteer team
- that Andrew and the team can find funding partners for the new area of the reserve
- that Andrew can find a balance between creating a space that is accessible to all but also adds to the biodiversity of the site
